LANDSCAPE AS A CHALLENGE
EXPERIMENTAL PROJECTS FOR THE REGENERATION OF HABITAT

The aim of the conference is to reveal the serious state of landscape crisis, which is not only an effect, but rather a contributing cause of more general downturn and, from an economic and financial crisis, has become a real permanent mutation that involves the whole society.

There is a need for a radical change of rules and procedures of implementation processes, but above all, there is an urgent need to promote a launch policy of landscape experimental projects, at all scales, of protection, management, development and planning. The international scene from the beginning of the twentieth century until most recent examples, shows us how landscapes could reveal extraordinary resources. From flowering to the garden, to the new generation of public spaces, to linear systems such as streets, roads, waterfronts, to the big construction site for the hydrological systems consolidation, to the waste gathering, to the regeneration of urban, rural, natural areas, it is necessary to experiment and compare new tools and methods on all issues that have a cultural vocation and sustainability enhancement, with a significant social and economic consequences. This can be done by considering the following priority policies:

1. Understanding and illustrating the habitat changes and our well-being and survival conditions.
2. Defining concerted planning processes regarding protection, management, innovation, planning and invention.
3. Promoting a continuous interaction between the works, human resources and landscape.

This is an important approach that should be taken as an essential affirmation of the rights and duties of everyone who is aware and responsible for a landscape, because it represent the deepest values of a civitas condition in a specific location, according to democracy principles.
